Tips for pronouncing Spanish

The good news about Spanish pronunciation is that it obeys clear phonetic rules, although people do speak with different accents, depending on their region and background.

Vowels

Each of the five vowels has its own clear sharp sound:

a as in hat

e as in pet

i as in feet

o as in clock

u as in drew

c's and z's

c + e = th

cero, once

c + i = th

cinco, gracias

z + a, o, u = th

zapato, corazón, azul

c + a = ka

casa, catorce

c + o = ko

cómo, color

c + u = ku

Cuba, cubano

j's and g's

J, as in jardines (gardens), is a harder, stronger version of the English 'h'. G, when followed by e and i, sounds exactly the same as j.

Otherwise, it is pronounced as the English 'g' in go.

ll's

The double ll, as in calle, is another characteristic Spanish sound. In most parts of Spain it's like the 'lli' in the English million.

h's

The h is silent in Spanish, so you won't be blowing any candles out when you pronounce words that begin with this letter. Best to imagine it's not there and pronounce the second letter in the word.

hablo, helado, ¡hola!, huevo

Tips for pronouncing Spanish

ñ

When you see a wiggly line — called a tilde (teeel-deh) — on top of the letter n that looks like ñ, use the ny sound that you use for the English word canyon

q

The letter q is always followed with a 'u' it is the vowel after that determines the sound made.

q + ue – kay sound – queso

q + ui – key sound - quince

v

Rules about adjectives

An adjective is always describing something, and that word is a noun. In Spanish you have to look at the noun's gender and number and then decide whether the adjective you are using needs to change.

Agreement

The adjective should have the same number and gender as the noun it describes. Sometimes the adjective does not have to change. The two rules for deciding are as follows:

if the adjective ends in –o then the o must change to a if the noun it describes is feminine;

if the adjective ends in any other letter do not change it — except:

if the adjective describes the nationality or regional origin of the noun, then it must be made feminine if the noun it describes is feminine;

if the noun is plural, the adjective should be made plural too.

For example:

	singular		plural
	masculine	feminine	masculine	feminine
short	bajo	baja	bajos	bajas
blue	azul	azul	azules	azules
English	inglés	inglesa	ingleses	inglesas

Position

In sentences where the noun and the adjective come next to each other, in ¿Qué tipo de persona eres?

Spanish it is the noun which comes first, usually. In English it is the other way round. For example:

We have a blue car

Tenemos un coche azul

A big garden

Un jardín grande

The tall girls

Las chicas altas

Some difficult lessons

Unas clases difíciles

There are very few cases where the word order is the same as in English. We will learn about those in year 9!

Tips for pronouncing Spanish

The good news about Spanish pronunciation is that it obeys clear phonetic rules, although people do speak with different accents, depending on their region and background.

Vowels

Each of the five vowels has its own clear sharp sound:

a as in hat

e as in pet

i as in feet

o as in clock

u as in drew

c's and z's

c + e = th cero, once

c + i = th cinco, gracias

z + a, o, u = th zapato, corazón, azul

c + a = ka casa, catorce

c + o = ko cómo, color

c + u = ku Cuba, cubano

j's and g's

J, as in 'jardines', is a harder, stronger version of the English 'h'.

G, when followed by e and i, sounds exactly the same as j.

Otherwise, it is pronounced as the English 'g' in go.

ll's

The double ll, as in 'calle', is another characteristic Spanish sound.

In most parts of Spain it's like the 'lli' in the English million.

h's

The h is silent in Spanish, so you won't be blowing any candles out when you pronounce words that begin with this letter. Best to imagine it's not there and pronounce the second letter in the word.

hablo, helado, ¡hola!, huevo

Regular present tense verbs

To talk about actions in the present, you need to change the infinitive verb by taking off the last 2 letters (either –AR, -ER, or –IR) and adding different endings.

The endings tell you who is doing the action of the verb. E.g. hablo = I speak, bailan = they dance.

In Spanish you usually leave out the subject pronoun (I, you, he, she...) because the endings show which person is referred to.

Look at the table below to see which endings you need to add to the regular –AR, -ER and –IR verbs to make the present tense.

NB: Use the tú and vosotros forms of ‘you’ when talking to friends, relations or children. Use the Usted and Ustedes forms when talking to an adult who you would not call by their first name.

Regular present tense verbs
	(AR) hablar – to speak	(ER) aprender – to learn	(IR) vivir – to live

vosotros (you, pl, fam)	habláis	aprendéis	vivís
ellos/ellas (they)	hablan	aprenden	viven
Ustedes (you, pl, formal)	hablan	aprenden	viven

Present tense endings table.

	AR	ER	IR
I	O	O	O
you (singular)	AS	ES	ES
he / she / it you (polite sing)	A	E	E
we	AMOS	EMOS	IMOS
you (plural)	ÁIS	ÉIS	ÍS
they	AN	EN	EN

How do we form the present tense?

To form the present tense, or conjugate a verb, we simply follow the following rules:

1. Plan your sentence in English
I speak many languages
1. Highlight the verbs in the sentence and work out what infinitive you will need
'I speak' is the verb and 'to speak' is the infinitive
3. Use your dictionary to find the infinitive in Spanish to speak = hablar
4. Stem the infinitive by knocking off the ar / er / ir habl
5. Work out the subject of the sentence (I, you, he, she)
I
6. Go to the endings table and add the correct ending on to the end of the stem hablo = I speak

Irregular present tense verbs

Some verbs do not follow the regular pattern and you need to learn these by heart. These 5 verbs are the most often used so it's worth learning them now!

The 2 verbs 'to be'
	SER – to be	ESTAR – to be	SER is for describing permanent or unchanging characteristics e.g. nationality, professions, physical appearances, time ESTAR is for locations and temporary conditions e.g. mood, state of health, weather, location and position, states that might change

There are 3 types of change:

e → ie
e → i

Rules about adjectives

An adjective is always describing something, and that word is a noun. In Spanish you have to look at the noun's gender and number and then decide whether the adjective you are using needs to change.

Agreement

The adjective should have the same number and gender as the noun it describes. Sometimes the adjective does not have to change. The two rules for deciding are as follows:

if the adjective ends in –o then the o must change to a if the noun it describes is feminine;

if the adjective ends in any other letter do not change it — except: if the adjective describes the nationality or regional origin of the noun, then it must be made feminine if the noun it describes is feminine;

if the noun is plural, the adjective should be made plural too.

For example:

	singular		plural
	masculine	feminine	masculine	feminine
short	bajo	baja	bajos	bajas
blue	azul	azul	azules	azules
English	inglés	inglesa	ingleses	inglesas

Position

In sentences where the noun and the adjective come next to each other, in Spanish it is usually the noun which comes first. In English it is the other way round. For example:

We have a blue car Tenemos un coche azul

A big garden Un jardín grande

The tall girls Las chicas altas

Some difficult lessons Unas clases difíciles

There are very few cases where the word order is the same as in English. We will learn about those in year 9!
